Présentation

Description

This module consists of writing a report on an innovation in the field of health, by teams of two to three students. The students will have to collect information using several sources, including at least two interviews with professionals (from research laboratories, industries, hospitals, etc.). The students will have to take into account the scientific, technical and biomedical aspects of the chosen innovation but also its socio-economic aspects. This exercise will allow students to get used to the rules for writing a scientific document.
